Opus Web Technologies Attends World's Largest Web & e-mail Conference in Chicago

Houghton, Michigan (April 28, 1997) - Jeffery Primeau of Opus Web Technologies, has attended the world's largest Web & e-mail Conference at Chicago's McCormick Place.

The business partnered by Primeau of Calumet and Heath Sundstrom of Houghton develop, design and deploy Internet Web sites for businesses and corporations.

The conference enabled Opus Web Technologies to be among the first in their business area to bring back skill and knowledge in the most current and advanced Internet technologies and applications to better serve clientele. The conference was the world's largest and was geared specifically toward automated sales force applications via the Web and Internet enabled marketing/electronic commerce.

While there, Primeau had the opportunity to represent Opus Web Technologies to the world's best known computer and information technology (IT) corporations such as Microsoft, Symantec, Aplix, Pipestream and Novell.

Opus Web Technologies is a Web site design and application support business for Internet technologies. We focus on businesses and organizations that wish to make a presence on the Internet. We develop and deploy professionally designed sites and then support those sites through various methods, technology tools and applications.

Web Technologies is headquartered at www.opusweb.com. More information can be obtained there, or by calling +1 906.482.3235.
